Netflix launches production on star-studded original thriller

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 9, 2022/PR Newswire/ — Netflix begins production on Greta Gerwig's recent film "Wolf River at Midnight," a thriller set in southern Mississippi.

Filming begins on Feb. 18. The film features Christian Bale of "The Dark Knight" as Buck Lazar and Timothée Chalamet of "Lady Bird" as Nicholas Lazar. The story is based on the book "Escape from the Wolf" and follows three women as they launch a mission to save a man from his deranged father. The film is set to release March 24, 2023.

"When Rita Wilson reached out with her idea for an exciting film, I immediately jumped in," Gerwig said. "I endorse Rita's commitment to make more films with women in strong lead roles."

Wilson expressed her love for the script based on the book "Escape from the Wolf." She said, "I love the script that Tony Moretti wrote because it features women in heroic roles and supports the empowerment of women."

Christian Bale is excited to play Buck Laurel, who is expected to become one of the most hated villains of all time. "I shuddered when reading the script and think movie fans will remember me in this role for many years to come," he said.

The trailer for the movie is available at Netflix.com/wolfriver.
